

What Could Have Happened?

I may or may not have left my account logged in overnight ...

What?! Oh my god...Which client?

and someone may or may not have stolen sensitive client data...and I have no idea what to do.

Redwire...

Whoa, whoa,
whoa!

Do you mean, 'second-biggest client' Redwire, or did you say something else?
Because I'm really hoping...

What should Elias do next?
Let's find out what choices
he could have made.

Tell his boss:

Flip to Page 9

Don't confess:

Flip to Page 12

I accidentally left my account logged in overnight and someone stole data from my computer..

However, I want to correct my error and offer to assist the company in this investigation.

...First of all, Elias, I appreciate your honesty. However, this data leak is a severe situation. The scandal will not only effect you and the client, but our reputation with other clients.

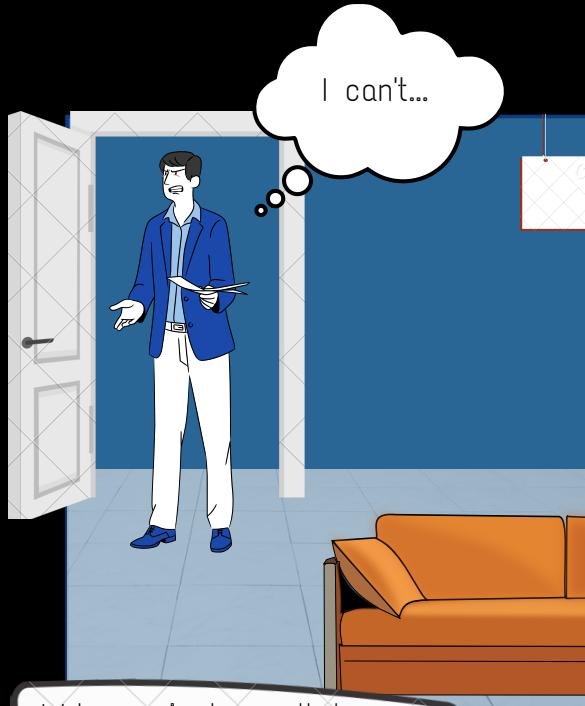

I hope you are fully aware that the ramifications of this error may cost the company billions of dollars and position the company to be sued.

I completely understand. I just want to reiterate that I'm willing to take responsibility and will try my best to assist in any way.

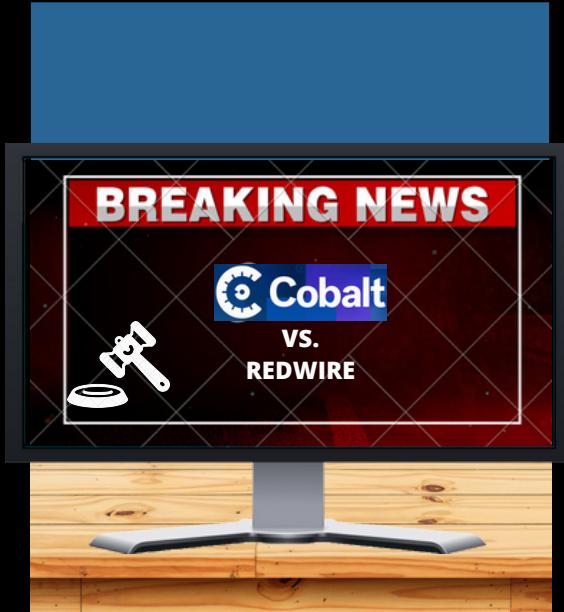

Elias, I will talk to my manager and plan an investigation. But first, we need to contact the client to make them aware of the situation.

I'm sorry, but for now you are suspended from your current project and are not allowed to come to work. You will be required to sign some NDAs and I will contact you about the future of your employment here.

ONE MONTH
LATER...

We've received news that we are being sued by Redwire for a data leak. Unfortunately, there will be lay-offs. The people directly under the Redwire project will be asked to comply with the investigation and provide information.

A FEW WEEKS LATER...

Elias....Come into my office

I should have come forward immediately. I lost my job..my company reputation..my life!

What should "YOU" do?

Leyla, Tri, Kerrick, Nguyen